

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A heart implant device for associating with a heart of a living body, the device including: (a) a housing for securely associating with heart tissue, the housing encompassing a space, the housing including a conductive coil, and (b) a ferromagnetic element disposed within the space, the element for moving relative to the coil so as to produce electrical energy within the living body.